again within the sixties Chicago's Lincoln Park used to be an engaging neighborhood. The foreign headquarters of the economic staff of the area was once there above whatever I remember as "The Armenian-American Soup Kitchen." So was once DePaul college and the Chicago Theological Seminary--the cause the eating place at the nook of Fullerton and Halsted remains to be known as the "Seminary." Down Halsted there has been a used bookstore, The Guild, choked with middle-aged communists with whom ABC of Anarchism I used to argue and from which i purchased my first booklet by way of C.G. My first buy used to be Berkman's The ABC of Anarchism. i feel the fellow in denims and blue workshirt who dealing with the shop urged it simply because i did not recognize what i used to be doing. I simply desired to be aware of what anarchism was once as a political ABC of Anarchism philosophy as certain from communism and socialism and impressive-sounding syndicalism. His recommendation used to be good. Berkman's essay is obvious and understandable, an outstanding begin for teens in pursuit of a higher ABC of Anarchism world. The shop is long gone now. So is the Guild. So is the IWW. So is the soup kitchen. So even is the Chicago Theological Seminary. The Yuppies moved in, exchanging the Brown Berets and the Panthers, laying a townhouse origin in what was Chicago's personal Peoples' Park. Ugh!
