Aesthetic Creation by Nick Zangwill

Nick Zangwill

What's the goal of a piece of art? What drives us to make art? Why can we price paintings and devour them? Nick Zangwill argues that we can't comprehend the character of artwork without first having solutions to those basic questions. On his view, which he calls Aesthetic Creation Theory, a piece of painting is anything created for a specific aesthetic purpose. More specifically, the functionality of artwork is to have its aesthetic value. Aesthetic Creation takes advantage of its non-aesthetic properties, and this functionality arises as a result of the artist's perception of those properties. In protecting this view, Zangwill presents an account of aesthetic value and aesthetic invention and exhibits how the aesthetic idea can accommodate forms of seeming counterexamples to aesthetic theories of art: narrative paintings and twentieth-century avant-garde art. Aesthetic Creation additionally includes a special exposition and critique of quite a number of rival views, together with Dickie's institutional conception of art, the idea of art that makes crucial connection with an audience, and sociological theories which Aesthetic Creation purports to provide an explanation for the character of artwork without recourse to the proposal of the aesthetic.
