Conquest of the New Word: Experimental Fiction and Translation in the Americas

Johnny Payne

Latin American fiction received nice acclaim within the USA through the 1960s, while many North American writers and critics felt that Conquest of the New Word: Experimental Fiction and Translation in the Americas our nationwide writing had reached a low ebb. During this research of experimental fiction from either Americas, Johnny Payne argues that the North American reception of the increase in Latin American fiction distorted the historic grounding of this writing, erroneously offering it as typically an unique magical realism. He bargains new readings that aspect the specific, historic relation among experimental fiction and diverse authors' careful, planned deformations and reformations of the political rhetoric of the trendy state. Payne juxtaposes writers from Argentina and Uruguay with North American authors, constructing suggestive parallels among the varied yet convergent practices of writers on either continents. He considers Conquest of the New Word: Experimental Fiction and Translation in the Americas Nelson Marra at the side of Donald Barthelme and Gordon Lish; Teresa Porzecanski with Harry Mathews; Ricardo Piglia with John Barth; Silvia Schmid and Manuel Puig with Fanny Howe and Lydia Davis; and Jorge Luis Borges and Luisa Valenzuela with William Burroughs and Kathy Acker. With this innovative, dual-continent approach, Conquest of the New Word: Experimental Fiction and Translation in the Americas could be of significant curiosity to every person operating in Latin American literature, women's studies, translation studies, artistic writing, and cultural theory.
