Following the devastating impression of foot-and-mouth disease, hill-farmer Paddy Fenton is dealing with monetary ruin. whilst an off-the-cuff acquaintance Dead Man Running (Eric Ward #13) deals to hire one in every of his outbuildings for cash, the temptation of constructing a bit funds at the part is just too solid to show down. He has the same opinion - and does not inquire too heavily into what may be taking place there. it is the worst choice Fenton has ever made. A police raid on his barn uncovers the creation of 'smokies' - unlawful meat production - and the farmer is accused as an accessory. The felony underworld that Fenton has unwittingly entered stretches a ways past the neighborhood countryside. It is right down to attorney Eric observe to rescue Fenton however it quickly turns into obvious that meat production is the least in their worries. Botched operations, a divided and corrupt workforce, and a bleak panorama choked with determined and dissatisfied characters give you the backdrop for Ward's chilling trip into the darkish underworld of the north, the place it isn't consistently transparent who's running, or precisely whom they're working from.
