La fame che abbiamo by Dave Eggers

Dave Eggers

Il libro è un insieme di storie dai soggetti e dalle ambientazioni più diverse: si passa dai ricordi di un setter irlandese in fuga alle meditazioni umoristiche e agrodolci sul suicidio e sull'amicizia. In realtà il libro costituisce un'avventura narrativa organicamente strutturata che fotografa dai più diversi punti di osservazione quella ineludibile domanda, quella ricerca ora affannosa ora La fame che abbiamo giocosa di qualcosa al di fuori di noi, di un senso, di una direzione: l. a. popularity che abbiamo, che è al centro delle nostre vite. Dave Eggers, autore di "L'opera struggente di un formidabile genio" e di "Conoscerete l. a. nostra velocità", è anche il creatore di una innovativa rivista letteraria, "McSweeney's".

Meh. An 00s observe for a truly 00s book. Like Eggers' You Shall comprehend Our speed (2002), it has a pre-lapsarian naivety: tales of middle-class white american citizens who, sooner than the crash, not often fear approximately money, and who cross on vacation to unique destinations and remain wrapped up of their personal worlds. a story that's embarrassingly sincere and sure accurate, yet will be retro and often vilified on-line now - specifically because it does not actively signpost embarrassment and guilt up to one is meant to. one can argue that Eggers' writing occupation has that smooth healing maxim (that isn't really correct for everyone, for often this stuff reduction one another simultaneously): take care of your individual shit sooner than attempting to aid others: his early books checked out self, friends and family of comparable backgrounds, then he moved directly to giant political, occasionally worldwide themes. I loved pace many years ago, yet lots of those brief tales i discovered relatively boring. I used to actually like Eggers (also Heartbreaking paintings - obviously correct for the 'loved-it-at-the-time' tag) and keep in mind saying, in all likelihood no longer on here, it may were on an artistic writing path pre-GR, that he completely captured how issues suppose and that i wanted i may write that way. I examine half How we're Hungry in 2011 and was once relatively inspired then. Now i locate it often flat and indifferent emotionally, and characters are boring simply because they're hardly ever attracted to something other than themselves, relatives and friends, and show it in a numbed, traditional way. that's a minimum of La fame che abbiamo quick to read. they're nonetheless understanding how they believe approximately daily stuff in a late-twenties manner - a significantly undesirable healthy for the characters elderly 40+, whose voices hardly sound like they're that age. Currently, Richard Powers is the writer who suits ... how I see life, which is not really definitely the right phrase, and besides the very suggestion of writers becoming your existence or outlook at definite issues seems like whatever from a rubbish, wanky MFA in a remark thread: yet feelings and reports in Powers' fiction are extra brilliant than in early Eggers, and he and his characters are fascinated about complicated issues outdoors themselves. Stuff I did like in How we're Hungry: -'Your mom and I': a father, most likely 40ish, is reminiscing approximately lifestyles to a pre-teen kid, other than he and his spouse actually 'put the area to rights' as you'll merely do in daydreams. a few of it really is huge stuff, different little own irritations. it is fascinating and unexpected, and it clicked with conversations i've got with associates approximately stuff we would like shall we change. Quote: approximately then, we had a true efficient period. In approximately six months, we demonstrated a world minimal wage, we made it so smoke detectors will be became off with no need to tear them from the ceiling, and we acquired Soros to shop for the Amazon to maintain it.-'Naveed'. A girl, twenties presumably, realises she's approximately to sleep along with her 13th individual and resolves to drag a fourteenth ASAP so her La fame che abbiamo 'number' will not be thirteen and he or she don't have to listen to jokes a couple of 'baker's dozen' and so on. Her expectation of judgement was once a disgrace - in my circle that wasn't a tremendous quantity at all, and not anyone was once judgemental approximately that stuff anyway, [who are those people who find themselves nonetheless like that and younger and never religious?] so being on '13' for as brief a time as attainable used to be easily superstition - however it was once a type of humorous little inner suggestions that one by no means expects to work out in writing.- 'Up the Mountain Coming Down Slowly'. relatively can be bracketed with the uninteresting tales approximately americans on unique holidays. yet extra fascinating in my opinion as it is approximately hiking & trekking, stuff that, if I have been healthy and well, i would otherwise be doing in my spare time than sitting approximately on GR - albeit in La fame che abbiamo much less environmentally fucked methods than this expedition. I beloved the mundane money owed of items one frequently hears in a special kind and with extra drama in non-fiction, and a spotlight to experiential info that these writers both forget about or are too professional to need to care for within the first place.- 'After La fame che abbiamo i used to be Thrown within the River and sooner than I Drowned'. Depressingly titled story, yet really quite exhilarating even the place the situations do not ring true. informed from puppy POV (Kafka inspiration?). Hint: the 2 occasions are years apart.- I marked the one issues that made me laugh. They make me sound like somewhat a sicko, yet anyway. She desired to open umbrellas within the faces of cats, lead them to scurry and scream. Wot? And rather less bizarrely: the matter is that Fish hasn't ever had a fascination with those who attempt to kill themselves. might be if he took extra of an curiosity within the concept, La fame che abbiamo Adam would not retain attempting to turn out how interesting it is.Elsewhere, it does considered one of issues that actually annoy me in fiction simply now. not less than the gathering does not comprise any goals or fortune telling scenes that come true. (Will somebody PLEASE write extra tales during which they don't.) yet there are characters who say they be aware of what is going to occur in a brand new friendship, e.g. I knew then that i La fame che abbiamo might get her a role the place I worked, that she and that i might turn into closer, that i'd understand the issues i need to grasp approximately her. I are inclined to recognize immediately if i admire humans IRL, in order that uncomplicated feeling i have no challenge with - yet this stuff, no. And it is getting dull the frequency with which apparently in books. There are extra fascinating methods for writers to teach their operating in the event that they are looking to do a little meta exhibit in their storyboard. Like 'Notes for a narrative of a guy Who won't Die Alone' - cool plan structure, which part jogged my memory why I used to love Eggers. A mis-step even though to make the guy a retired ob-gyn (it's difficult for a male one to not appear a bit odd, and somebody who'd had a lot to do with healthcare could see death as a messier and no more predictable company than the nature does). The plot was once form of captivating alongside the strains of Dave Gorman / Danny Wallace projects, yet I puzzled if i might have spotted ten years in the past how crashingly egotistical the character's notion was; now that realisation spoilt the possibly endearing nature of the piece. In either its stable and undesirable issues it appeared La fame che abbiamo remarkably of its time.I in simple terms learn this simply because i might began it long ago - and it is short. unsure i might suggest it for a person except Eggers La fame che abbiamo completists.
