Latinos and the New Immigrant Church

David A. Badillo

Latin American citizens make up the most important new immigrant inhabitants within the United States, and Latino Catholics are the fastest-growing region of the Catholic Church in America. During this book, historian David A. Badillo bargains a background of Latino Catholicism within the USA by means of taking a look at Latinos and the New Immigrant Church at its development in San Antonio, Chicago, New York, and Miami. Focusing on twentieth-century Latino urbanism, Badillo contrasts large historical commonalities of Catholic spiritual culture with adaptations of Latino ethnicity in a variety of locales. He emphasizes the contours of daily existence in addition to a variety of facets of institutional and lived Catholicism. The tale of Catholicism is going past clergy and laity; it includes the complete city adventure of neighborhoods, downtown strength seekers, archdiocesan movers and shakers, and various corporations and institutions associated with parishes. Even though parishes stay the main web site for Latino efforts to construct person and cultural identities, Badillo argues that one needs to examine concurrently the triad of parish, city, and ethnicity to completely understand the effect of varied Latino populations on either Catholicism and the city setting within the United States. By contrasting the improvement of Latinos and the New Immigrant Church in three certain Latino communities—the Mexican Americans, Puerto Ricans, and Cuban Americans—Badillo demands situations the preferred notion of an overarching "Latino experience" and provides Latinos and the New Immigrant Church in its place an integrative method of figuring out the scope, depth, and complexity of the Latino contribution to the nature of America's city landscapes.
