Lost in the City: Tree of Desire and Serafin: Two Novels by Ignacio Solares

Ignacio Solares

Cristina, the younger protagonist of Tree of Desire, and her little brother Joaquin run clear of a house that's outwardly normal, yet inwardly dysfunctional. misplaced at the streets of Mexico City, they confront essentially the most terrifying features of urban life. Or is all of it a dream? the tale suggests, with no confirming, that sexual abuse Lost in the City: Tree of Desire and Serafin: Two Novels by Ignacio Solares has pushed Cristina to her determined escape. yet is it an escape? Are they awakening from a dream, or reentering a nightmare? Serafin, too, is misplaced within the city. trying to find his father who has abandoned the family, he's nearly helpless amid the town dangers. Serafin reveals compassion in awesome places, yet will he continue to exist to come to his mom and their Lost in the City: Tree of Desire and Serafin: Two Novels by Ignacio Solares rural village? those novels through certainly one of Mexico's most appropriate writers remove darkness from many points of up to date Mexican life. Solares describes Mexico's diversified social sessions with Dickensian realism. His specialize in younger protagonists, strange in Mexican literature, opens a window onto difficulties of kid's vulnerability that understand no nationwide borders. on the comparable time, his use of components of the glorious and the paranormal, and his evocative writing style, make interpreting his novels a most enjoyable experience.
