Kwitny has written an soaking up biography that's neither hyperventilatingly in awe nor blindly serious of Karol Wojty<sup>3</sup>a and his pontificate. It is a very human photograph we get of a powerful guy who has his personal blindness (though "shortsightedness" will be a greater description). One factor that sticks out is Wojty<sup>3</sup>a's wish for peace that typically ends up in fascinating contradictions. For example, his interfaith conferences and his wish to heal either the Orthodox/Catholic and the Anglican/Catholic rifts meet genuine hassle while humans observe the Catholic church's acknowledged target is to transform every body to Catholicism - "And he stated to them, "Go into all of the global and proclaim the excellent news to the full creation" (Mark 16.15). It additionally turns into transparent that Wojty<sup>3</sup>a is an highbrow and infrequently has difficulties getting his rules throughout in Man of the Century: The Life and Times of Pope John Paul II order that simpletons (read: Reagan and Bush) can comprehend what he is riding at (i.e., that he is basically advocating a few parts of capitalism and never the brutal, unchecked Republican capitalism). Lastly, because the booklet progresses it turns into more and more noticeable that Wojty<sup>3</sup>a is likely one of the infrequent kinds that, rather than changing into a growing number Man of the Century: The Life and Times of Pope John Paul II of liberal and tolerant as Man of the Century: The Life and Times of Pope John Paul II he grows older, turns into increasingly more stodgy and conservative.
