The Medici Women: Portraits of Power, Love, and Betrayal from the Court of Duke Cosimo I ducal courtroom of Cosimo I de' Medici in sixteenth-century Florence was once considered one of absolutist, rule-bound order. Portraiture in particular served the dynastic pretensions of the absolutist ruler, Duke Medici Women: Portraits of Power, Love, and Betrayal from the Court of Duke Cosimo I Cosimo and his consort, Eleonora di Toledo, and used to be a part of a Herculean programme of propaganda to set up legitimacy and status for the recent sixteenth-century Florentine court. In this attractive and unique study, Gabrielle Langdon analyses chosen pics of girls via Jacopo Pontormo, Agnolo Bronzino, Alessandro Allori, and different masters. She defines their functionality as works of art, as dynastic declarations, and as encoded records of court docket tradition and propaganda, illuminating Cosimo's wakeful fashioning of his court docket portraiture in imitation of the good courts of Europe. Langdon explores using portraiture as a car to precise Medici political policy, corresponding to with Cosimo's Hapsburg and Papal alliances in his bid to be made Grand Duke with hegemony over rival Italian princes. Stories from archives, letters, diaries, chronicles, and mystery ambassadorial briefs, open up an international of fascinating, personalities, own triumphs, human frailty, rumour, intrigue, and appalling tragedies. Lavishly illustrated, "Medici Women: snap shots of Power, Love and Betrayal within the court docket of Duke Cosimo I" is an necessary paintings for somebody with a keenness for Italian renaissance history, art, and court docket culture.

Langdon's painstaking, empathetic ebook bargains convincing and lucrative entry to the wealthy and not easy language of those paintings. Her personal verbal snap shots of the advanced characters and sometimes tragic histories of the Medici girls are splendidly evocative. I used Medici Women: Portraits of Power, Love, and Betrayal from the Court of Duke Cosimo I to be sorry to finish.
