Murder Most Postal: Homicidal Tales That Deliver A Message (Murder Most)

Martin H. Greenberg

Homicidal stories that carry a MessageSpecial supply indeed! This selection of twenty-one tales via masters of mystery--including Evan Hunter, Ellery Queen, Gordon R. Dickson, and more--is approximately purloined postage, deadly letters, and cold-blooded correspondence. From Edgar Allan Poe's nineteenth-century vintage "The Purloined Letter," which tells of a missive long past off beam and crafty manner within which it really is retrieved, to Matthew Costello's very twenty-first-century chat-room intrigue, "Someone Who knows Me," those stories are top notch examples of simply how harmful getting into contact can be. Contents: Like a bone within the throat / Lawrence Block The purloined letter / Edgar Allan Poe An act of violence / William F. Nolan The cCorbett correspondence / Agent no. five and Agent no. 6 Agony Cluumn / Barry N.
