Oman: Politics and Society in the Qaboos State

Marc Valeri

With assistance from British advisors, Sultan Qaboos overthrew his father, the ruler of Oman, in 1970, but few anticipated the hot chief to thrive. Sultan Qaboos was once an unexpected determine to his Oman: Politics and Society in the Qaboos State personal people, and Oman used to be a terrible state wracked via a number of civil wars. Nevertheless, Sultan Qaboos cemented his rule by way of introducing a coverage of nationwide unification and assimilating all of Oman into an oil rentier country framework. He additionally promoted the concept the determine of the sultan may perhaps include the state, which later ended in a party of the sultan as an incarnation of Oman's "renaissance."Based on years of research, Marc Valeri treats the political occupation of Sultan Qaboos as a case examine revealing the social and political mechanisms of authoritarianism in postcolonial states. Valeri examines how Sultan Qaboos demonstrated and consistently renewed his base as a way to meet inner and exterior demanding situations to his power. He additionally considers what occurs whilst one a part of this model, specifically an oil-rent economy, falters, and the privileges loved by means of part the inhabitants are not any longer tenable. In particular, Valeri addresses the production of a unique version and the way this pursuit relies as a lot at the community of strength and privilege that has constructed along polity as at the interference of monetary and technological forces. on the related time, diverse and overlapping identities-ethnic, religious, historical, or a mix thereof-persist and at times reemerge, intertwining with demanding situations to wider state- and nation-building routines and to the regime's legitimizing strategies. In conclusion, Valeri expands his concentration past the kingdom of Oman, comparing the practices of alternative Arab monarchies in Morocco, Jordan, and the Persian Gulf.

"Sultan Qaboos has needed to create one of the population of this territory a sense of belonging to a standard "imagined neighborhood ".
