Plants and People of the Golden Triangle: Ethnobotany of the Hill Tribes of Northern Thailand

Edward F. Anderson

Anderson (research botanist, wasteland Botanical Gardens, Phoenix) made six journeys to the distant mountains of northern Thailand and taken again details on over 1,000 plant species utilized Plants and People of the Golden Triangle: Ethnobotany of the Hill Tribes of Northern Thailand by the six significant tribes of the sector for food, fibers and dyes, medicines, pleasure, and working with the spirit world. the data is at risk of being misplaced because the individuals are assimilated into the mainstream Thai tradition and lose touch with their conventional lifestyles. contains 2 hundred colour photographs. For normal readers and experts in botany, ethnobotany, pharmacology, and local studies. Annotation c. by way of booklet News, Inc., Portland, Or.

greater than simply botany, with anthropological insights, first-class photographs, and cultural vignettes. Anderson bemoans the sluggish lack of crops and isolation-reinforced cultural power as travelers and different outsiders bring up touch with the hill tribes, yet i do not see him as a part of this damaging effect as his target is to maintain the tribes' wisdom in a culturally delicate means that continues to be scientifically accurate.
