Ruling Passion a by Judith Michael

Judith Michael

A romantic triangle turns vicious as television reporter Valerie Sterling turns into the target of a jealous rival's vengeance.

the radical Ruling Passion a discusses many issues. primarily it's a novel approximately characters Valerie and Sybille and the clashes among both. yet in a deeper research we will be able to see that the novelist is throwing a few tricky inquiries to the society. whilst the folk imagine that cash issues every little thing and to procure funds do whatever the elemental values of the human society will collapse. The lack of those humanitarian values is particularly good mentioned within the novel. Another an important factor the novelist attempting to speak about is the marketization of religion. In this global of globalization even non secular beliefs turns into one other commodity and whereas promoting the commodity basically revenue matters. The Ruling Passion a conflict among non secular values and industry values is going again to center a while itself. The impact of cash corrupted even the tested church buildings itself. The God-men and spiritual preachers are subjected to such a lot of corruption nowadays. The impression of mass medias and different applied sciences on society and the way it discards social values, all mentioned during this novel. In the final a part of the radical the writer attempted to offer a mental clarification to the undesirable deeds of the crucial 'negative' character, Sybille yet failed.
