a brief paintings of mystery, initially inside the 1903 collection, The Sorceress of the Strand. From the instant that Geoffrey Rowland took ownership of the necklace there have been a number of makes an attempt made to deprive him of it. Sword, fire, water, poison, had all been used, yet ineffectually. The necklace with its 80 pearls, smooth, symmetrical, pear-shaped, of a translucent white color and with a subdued iridescent sheen, used to be nonetheless within the ownership of the family, and used to be more likely to stay there, as George Rowland instructed me, until eventually the top of time.
