The Norton Anthology of Theory and Criticism

Vincent B. Leitch

The Norton Anthology of idea and feedback is the superior for a person who needs to appreciate the improvement and present kingdom of literary theory. providing 185 items (31 of them new) by means of 148 authors (18 of them new), The Norton Anthology of concept and Criticism, moment Edition, is extra comprehensive, and The Norton Anthology of Theory and Criticism extra varied, in its choice than The Norton Anthology of Theory and Criticism the other anthology. New choices from non-western idea and a completely up to date 20th century choice make the e-book much more various and authoritative.

evidently did not learn all 3k pages. the intro's perspicuous. choices contain all of the texts i have continuously heard of and The Norton Anthology of Theory and Criticism desired to read. a broad, broad, oversimplified specific summary: 1. Classical (Plato, Aristotle/Horace) 2. Medieval (Augustine, Dante, exegetical traditions) 3. Renaissance = Neoclassical (Pope, Spenser; genres, three unities, verisimilitude; progress of vernacular) 4. Romanticism (Hegel's/Kant's subjectivity; American/French revolutions; play of consciousness; person genius) 5. Marxism (Althusser, Foucault; textual content as social context; artwork as fugitive, counter-ideology & heteroglossia) 6. Psychoanalysis (Freud; unconscious, dreams; Bloom's "anxiety of influence"; Lacan's "écriture feminine") 7. Formalism (New feedback & Russian Formalism; Cleanth Brooks; primacy of textual content as closed item for analysis) 8. Reader-Response thought (implied/virtual/historical/ideal/super/critical&resisting/real readers; which means could be fastened yet value changes; that means has multifarious angles) 9. Structuralism -> Semiotics/ology (subject and subjectivity; language as symbolic platforms with synchronic bases no longer diachronic effects; relief of analyzing conventions and plots into patterns) 10. Deconstruction -> Poststructuralism aka Postmodernism (Derrida's "undecidability", all textual content as sliding intertext borrowing from different texts; neopragmatism that interpretations do not turn out yet persuade, are unique and useful) 11. Feminism & Queer thought (Kristeva, Cixous; phallogocentrism; anti-Oedipal; "compulsory heterosexuality"; politics of difference) 12. Post-Colonial reviews (language as cultural power/rule; hybridity = no such natural culture; African-Americans as instance of neither Anglo-Saxon nor African) 13. Cultural experiences & New Historicism (embrace of low- & mid-brow culture; increasing definition of lit which changes; paintings as textual content to learn social context)
