"How did you care for all of it?" he requested quietly. They either spotted the tenderness in his voice. Liza glanced over at him with a strong, decided grin. "You cry a lot. There are insufferable swimming pools of sadness. You get angry. you close up down. i did not wish something to do with anyone. essentially starved myself for a while. Eventually, you discover you do not very similar to your self like that," she explained, taking a deep breath. "When you get there you might have a choice." She paused. "Let it take you down, or let the harm to develop into part of you." She nodded, remembering it. "Seems to me you would regularly be in ache that way," Teddy acknowledged as his eyes searched hers. "No," she said, shaking her head firmly. "No, the ache becomes memory. and also you honor that reminiscence by means of living, I think." She nodded, tears forming in her eyes. "By creating, simply because that is you it really is who you are." Teddy recalled the phrases his mom had shared with him. "You need to turn into what you have been born to be..."
