The Venus Hottentot by Elizabeth Alexander

Elizabeth Alexander

The Venus Hottentot is the 1st choice of poems, together with 8 formerly unpublished, through this fascinating younger poet. Elizabeth Alexander's poems are instantaneously deepest and collective-addressing concerns which are public concerns, yet pushed by way of deepest voices.

Out of this collection, the name poem fairly serves because the benchmark. "The Venus Hottentot" is divine. I'd quote it in its entirety for strains like: In the newspaper lithograph my buttocks are proven swollen and luminous as a planet. Monsieur Cuvier investigates among my legs, poking, prodding, sure of his hypothesis. I part count on him to drag silkscarves from inside of me, paper poppies, then a rabbit! He complains at my smell and doesn't think I comprehend, yet I speak English. I converse Dutch. I speak a little French as well, and languages Monsieur Cuvier will by no means comprehend have names. There's a palpable beat that I felt in my chest, a musicality (especially with the jazz references) in poems like "John Coltrane," "Van Der Zee," and "Kevin of the NE Crew" (which I have learned over and over). From "Kevin of the NE Crew": "Turn your head, boy. examine me, boy. Dark day, candy smell, smoke odor blue. Split-lip black boy mind scent candy boy, Look my way, boy. examine you. And "Ode" is a great instance of her narrative skills. An throughout relatively positive collection.
