Theoretical theory of the dynamics of chemical reactions has gone through a spectacular improvement over the last few years, brought on by means of the development in experiments. Beam production, spectroscopic detection using high resolution, polarized lasers allowing power and angular Theory of Chemical Reaction Dynamics momentum selection, etc. have complex quite a bit that the experiments now supply targeted scattering details for idea to give an explanation for and rationalize. while advances in computing and networking technologies for heterogeneous and grid environments are giving new percentages for theoretical stories of chemical reactivity. As a consequence, through now calculation of atom+diatom reactions has turn into routine, exact equipment were constructed to explain reactions in tetraatomic systems, non-adiabatic reactions are being studied in simultaneous experimental and theoretical efforts, and statistical theories of unimolecular reaction dynamics are applied to systems that were a secret many years ago. The elevated curiosity within the field is testified through an excessive job of conferences, faculties and collaborative networks. The NATO scientific department has routinely contributed to this field via assisting workshops and schools. alongside this line we organized the NATO complex learn Workshop at the idea of the Dynamics Theory of Chemical Reaction Dynamics of Chemical Theory of Chemical Reaction Dynamics Reactions in Balatonföldvár, Hungary in June, 2003. The workshop has given a photograph of the present prestige of analysis in response dynamics. on the assembly 36 papers have been presented followed by enlightening discussions. Accurate time-dependent and time-independent methods of quantum scattering, treatment of non-adiabatic processes, reports of associative and inelastic collisions, calculation of strength surfaces obtained elevated attention.
