Armed with a doctorate from Harvard, the hero of Thinker, Sailor, Brother, undercover agent sallies into academe and turns into a professor of economics, dean of an enterprise school, critic Thinker, Sailor, Brother, Spy of the de-sexualization of women, and dilettante lover. Yet ahead of all this, he swerves as First Lieutenant of the destroyer U.S.S. Hobson in the course of global battle II and, recalled to lively Thinker, Sailor, Brother, Spy duty, he turns into leader Engineer of the destroyer U.S.S. Hunt throughout the Korean War. His reviews Thinker, Sailor, Brother, Spy aboard send are corresponding to the rigors and tribulations portrayed in Herman Wouk's The Caine Mutiny. All through his errant life, he encounters such best lighting as Mark Van Doren, Mae and Walter Reuther, Vernon Jordan (his family's first baby-sitter), Jimmy Hoffa, and Vladimir Androsov, a professor from Moscow. The literate byplay among John and his brother Donald, a professor of English and comparative literature, yield extraordinary insights into the publish-or-perish cuckoo land of collage imbrolios.
