U. S. Army Medical Research Institute

Excerpt from USAMRIID's scientific administration of Chemical Casualties Handbook:

"Chemical war isn't a favored topic, and so much army wellbeing and fitness care services don't willingly familiarize yourself with it. This used to be painfully visible in the course of Operation wilderness Shield/Desert typhoon whilst it quickly turned obvious that many future health care prone knew little concerning the results of chemical brokers or the clinical safeguard opposed to them. This lack of know-how was once rather remarkable in view of the seven-decade lengthy historical past of contemporary chemical battle and the well-publicized use of mustard and nerve brokers throughout the Iran-Iraq conflict in the 1980s. the present angle of army wellbeing and fitness care companies was once that chemical brokers will be used simply on Hmong, Usamricd's Medical Management Of Chemical Casualties Handbook Afghans, Kurds, or equally unprepared and unprotected teams of people. Further, many wellbeing and fitness care services believed if chemical guns have been used the end result will be disastrous, safeguard will be impossible, and the casualty expense and death will be high."
